

A Note in February 2026

This paper, “When Taxi Drivers Meet Dynamic Pricing: A Lesson from Singapore’s JustGrab Program”, was accepted by the Regional Science and Urban Economics on December 4, 2025 and scheduled to publish in the 2026 February issue. However, before the proof was done and in early January, the data provider (one branch of the Singapore government) raised concerns over how the data was described in the paper and asked us and the journal to remove the paper before further review. This issue does not affect the essence of the paper, and the journal has invited us to resubmit the paper upon approval by the government branch after proper revision and reviews. We are working on this now.

Update in September 2026

We have revised the paper and obtained the government branch’s approval. We have resubmitted the paper to the journal.